MIKO SAMURAI, CHAPTER ONE

I'm happy to present Miko Samurai, Thanks to the collective efforts of my staff, we managed to pull this together. A few things to note are:

- Mutsu speaks in double exponents most of the time
- There are notes at the end for a couple of the concepts.
- This is completely random.

I hope that you all enjoy this manga. It was amusing to work on.

On a PERSONAL note, I seriously need another translator. So if are interested in helping out and you speak Japanese, contact me. [corosquerr\[at\]yahoo\[dot\]co](mailto:corosquerr[at]yahoo[dot]co)

Thanks, and enjoy!

NOTES

Domain Approved Revenge:

In Japan's feudal past, the samurai class upheld the honor of their family, clan, or their lord through the practice of revenge killings, or katanauchi. These killings could also involve the relatives of an offender. Today, katanauchi is most often pursued by peaceful means, but revenge remains an important part of Japanese culture – wikipedia

Basically, if someone kills someone you have ties to (father, brother, mother), you can petition the government for an approved "revenge." As long as it's deemed "justified," then your revenge is permitted without consequence. This also required witnesses that you followed the rules and it was a "fair fight."

Temple child:

Unwanted children were sometimes left to Buddhist monasteries. The thing about the random sex acts... seems to be true. It's a popular theme in many male love fiction/manga/light novels. (check wikipedia if you want more information on ukiyo and Nanshoku (homosexuality))

Man Kikumar:

Kikumar's name means "10,000 chrysanthemum rings," which MAGICALLY can ALSO be read as "10,000 wishes."

Neko Samurai Ch 2

my apologies for taking so long. As it turned out, I was a LITTLE overwhelmed with RL, and it got hectic. Also, the plot progress was getting a LITTLE bit messy. At first, now

I want to reveal everyone that I'm not the most keen Japanese translator, but the Neko progress are the sum of individual effort in one place. It is only because I got a lot of support from people that I'm able to release anything. And it's not satisfying to do EVERYTHING.

So, this was a for my people. Thank you all for your help! I also welcome those who are new to Neko. Thank you for everything!

How dare, read on, and enjoy Neko Samurai Ch 2. Goodbye, you silly thing.

Translator Notes for Neko Samurai - Ch2

1) NEKOICAT: I'm informed that, in YAOI speak, this is another way to say LIKE/bottom. I think I've mentioned that I'm not as "YAOI-intense" as most of my staff, so I had no idea. (See... bed me. I learn something new every day.)

2) RYU: I'm going to make this easier (not easy... just easier) and say that, approximately around the end of the Sengoku Period (You know, Oda Nobun/Asano Yashie/Omusha?), they started to need centralized money. Much like other places, it was based on the weight of how much gold (or silver/copper) was in the coin. This is only important because, after the Meiji Restoration (Think Russo/Korean/The Last Samurai [although that was based on the Satsuma Rebellion]), they switched to paper money.

Thus, by the time of Meiji Restoration:

1 yen = 1 ryo / 1 ryo = approx. 15g of gold

(The amount of gold per ryo degenerated as time went on, because people kept cutting the amount of gold in each coin to make more coins. We would call this "inflation.")

Ryo was originally a measure imported from China, whose monetary system (and everything else) the Japanese were trying to emulate. (check around if you don't believe me... but I got this from my Tokugawa History course...)

3) Random "Cross to bear" note: I have Kikumaru say this, and it was mentioned by my staff. "Cross to bear" is indeed a Christian reference, but it's not like Christianity (specifically Catholicism) was unknown to the Japanese. If anything, Oda Nobunaga LIKED the Christians. It wasn't until later that Tokugawa decided to kick the foreigners out, but it didn't stop Christians in Japan. It just drove them underground (Think of Samurai Champloo and Shimabara Rebellion). Since there are no direct time period notes (we can assume it's Tokugawa Era from the Revenge Killings, the fact they're carrying swords, and there are "sword schools"), I don't know when during the Tokugawa period this is set... so it IS possible that Kikumaru knew about Jesus. On the other hand, that specific phrase... probably not. But I liked it. XP

Love me any way!!

TODAY, AGAIN, THE RASCALLY VIRGIN SAMURAI
HUNTS FOR HIS DREAM MAN!

SFX: Crickets chirping

I'm feeling it 'bad' because I don't want to say 'shin'. 'Doushima' is an honourary way to say 'Moshi'.
